Welcome back to the States Leading campaign!

This year, the States Leading newsletter will showcase the latest state initiatives and innovations from each month so that you can learn more about how states are leading the way in educational equity.

This month, we highlight new community engagement efforts in Arkansas, a celebration of Black History Month in New York, new resources from ExcelinEd and NASBE, and much more.

The Ohio Department of Education and the Center for Education Policy Research at Harvard University are working together to test solutions for chronic absenteeism, college readiness, and college enrollment in rural education.
The Nebraska Department of Education created the Nebraska Instructional Materials Collaborative to inform and support the local creation of high-quality, standards-aligned instructional materials that will prepare students for success in college, career, and civic life.

The Kentucky Department of Education created the Kentucky Academy for Equity in Teaching to identify and prepare highly effective, experienced, and diverse educators poised to transition into the teaching profession in Kentucky’s public schools.
The Maryland State Department of Education launched the new MDCTEWORKS.org website to increase the visibility of career technical education and provide a student- and parent-friendly interface to support career planning and job preparation.

The Iowa Department of Education highlights Northstar Elementary, an integrated school, parent, and community model that enhances the health and well-being of students through nutrition education, mindfulness, and positive behavioral interventions and supports.
With 1000% percent growth in dual language immersion programs since 2012, the Delaware State Department of Education is helping English Learners gain a competitive advantage with higher levels of proficiency in literacy and mathematics over their non-immersion peers.

The Illinois State Board of Education announced the new group of students and representatives from higher education, K-12 education, and policy organizations that will make up the Diverse and Learner Ready Teacher Network to provide recommendations on increasing teacher diversity.
The Indiana Department of Education created social-emotional learning competencies and Project Advancing Wellness and Resilience Education tools to increase mental health awareness and provide training and resources for students in need.

Mississippi Superintendent Carey Wright spoke with the Hechinger Report about how the Mississippi Department of Education’s Early Learning Collaboratives use data to better understand classroom practices, programs, and policies that benefit children throughout their educational experiences.

The Arkansas Department of Education launched the R.I.S.E. Spotlight campaign to share best practices and promote community collaboration in reading.
In celebration of Black History Month, the New York State Education Department teamed up with The Education Trust to highlight the state’s My Brother’s Keeper schools and gather inspiring quotes from their students. Check out the hashtag #MyHistoryMyFuture to see what they had to say.

The U.S. Department of Defense Education Activity created the Choices360 program to help middle and high school students explore college and career options, develop a five-year plan, and navigate the college selection process.
NASBE redesigned its healthy schools database, the NASBE State Policy Database on School Health, to align the existing state statutory and regulatory language on student health to components of the Whole School, Whole Community, Whole Child model.

ExcelinEd published a new playbook that presents various funding models state policymakers can consider as they prioritize their state career and technical program offerings.
